

Why be a star when you can make a constellation?

Kaba's abolitionist vision burns so bright precisely because she refuses to be the single star, dazzling alone. Why be a star when you can make a constellation? And that's what we see in this book—the brilliance that shines from Kaba and an entire constellation of co-organizers, cofounders, and coconspirators, together in an abolitionist practice of refusal, care, and collectivity. Refusal: because we cannot collaborate with the prison-industrial complex, as "only evil will collaborate with evil" (June Jordan). Care: because

Newer

Older

19th February 2025

You lack the sense of taking part

19th February 2025

Died from laughing

sonia turcotte © 2022-2025

RSS feed

Made with Montaigne and by anton 